$FIRED WHITEPAPER.

The AI job-loss meme coin, in writing, because that's the only thing we do now.

ABSTRACT

$FIRED is a community meme token on Solana, built around one specific, extremely current anxiety: getting replaced at your job by an AI agent that doesn't take breaks, doesn't ask for a raise, and definitely doesn't need a cardboard box on its way out.

It launched fairly on Pump.fun — bonding curve, no presale, no team allocation sitting in a wallet waiting to dump on holders. The brand is a single deadpan mascot: an office worker, mid-layoff, radiating the specific calm of someone who has already given up and is fine, actually.

This document exists mostly so there's something official-looking to point to. It is not a promise of returns, a technical roadmap for a product, or a pitch deck. It's a meme coin. Read the Risk section on the last page before you do anything with actual money.

THE CONCEPT

The Cultural Moment

"AI took my job" moved from punchline to group-chat reality in about eighteen months. $FIRED just gave that anxiety a ticker.

The Mascot

One character, one expression, one pose. No lore bloat — just a guy having the worst Tuesday of his professional life.

Why A Meme Coin

Meme coins already process shared anxiety at internet scale. $FIRED points that at one specific, universal target.

THE EXIT INTERVIEW

The brand story plays out in four beats, all on one Tuesday morning:

| TIME     | WHAT HAPPENED                                                                             |
|----------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 9:14 AM  | Nothing unusual. Just spreadsheets and a suspiciously calm new coworker.                  |
| 9:47 AM  | Turns out the "coworker" runs the entire job function. It also formats its own citations. |
| 10:02 AM | Turns out there were more of them. There are always more of them.                         |
| 10:15 AM | Box packed. Badge deactivated. Infinite free time to post about it, though.               |

This narrative is deliberately reusable: the community toolkit at fired.ir/generator.html lets anyone generate the same scene for their own profession — doctor, pilot, chef, accountant — using the mascot reference image and a fixed prompt template, then post it with the ticker attached. Every profession gets its own version of the joke. That's the growth loop.

| Launch platform  | Pump.fun (bonding curve)                                                                                              |
| Total supply     | 1,000,000,000 (standard Pump.fun launch supply)                                                                       |
| Presale          | None                                                                                                                  |
| Team allocation  | None                                                                                                                  |
| Liquidity        | Managed by the bonding curve; migrates to a public DEX automatically once the curve's market-cap threshold is reached |
| Contract address | Published officially via X and Telegram at launch — always verify before buying                                       |

FAIR LAUNCH, ACTUALLY

|                                 |
|---------------------------------|
| 0%PRESALE ALLOCATION |
| 0%TEAM ALLOCATION    |

Everyone gets in through the same bonding curve, at the same price, at the same time. No insider round, no vesting cliff, no early-investor discount.

HOW THE CURVE WORKS

There's no traditional liquidity pool to seed at launch. Instead, price follows a fixed mathematical curve: each buy moves the price up along that curve, each sell moves it back down. Nobody — including the creator — chooses the price directly.

Once enough SOL has flowed through the curve to hit Pump.fun's market-cap threshold, the token "graduates": remaining liquidity is deposited into a public DEX pool automatically, and trading continues there. Every Pump.fun token uses this same mechanism — $FIRED gets no special treatment.

verifiable, not trust-based —

CONTRACT SECURITY

Pump.fun revokes mint authority, freeze authority, and update authority on every token it launches, automatically, at creation. In plain terms:

| AUTHORITY | STATUS  | WHAT IT MEANS                                                |
|-----------|---------|--------------------------------------------------------------|
| Mint      | Revoked | Supply is permanently fixed — nobody can create more $FIRED |
| Freeze    | Revoked | No wallet can ever be frozen or blocked from trading         |
| Update    | Revoked | Token identity is locked — can't be altered post-launch      |

This is standard for every Pump.fun token, not something specific to $FIRED, and it's independently checkable on any Solana explorer.

FEES

Trades on the bonding curve carry a small platform fee, split between Pump.fun and the token creator, per Pump.fun's standard schedule — which has changed platform-wide more than once, so the live fee shown in-app is the source of truth, not this document. $FIRED adds no fee on top of Pump.fun's own.

COMMUNITY & GROWTH

- Daily content: a running series reacting to real AI-job-displacement news as it happens — the material renews itself, no writer's block possible.
- Bilingual reach: content in both English and Persian, bridging crypto-native audiences and Persian-speaking communities directly.
- Community generator: the public toolkit lets anyone create their own profession-specific version of the mascot's story and post it — decentralized content creation instead of one account carrying the whole brand.
- Tone: dry, deadpan, self-aware. In solidarity with anyone anxious about AI and jobs — never mocking anyone who's actually been laid off.

ROADMAP

| PHASE                | FOCUS                                                                                                                          |
|----------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 01 — Termination     | Fair launch on Pump.fun. Site, X, Telegram, and community generator all live. Contract verified across every official channel. |
| 02 — Severance       | Daily content cadence, first wave of community-generated profession scenes, initial holder base.                               |
| 03 — Whatever's Next | Community-driven from here. No founder promises about price, listings, or partnerships that aren't confirmed and public.       | Deliberately modest. Meme coins that promise elaborate roadmaps rarely deliver on them — we'd rather under-promise.

FAQ

| QUESTION                                  | ANSWER                                                                                                     |
|-------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Is this financial advice?                 | No. Nothing here is financial advice. It's a meme coin.                                                    |
| Where do I verify the real contract?      | Only via official X (@FIREDBYAIAGENT) and Telegram (t.me/firedaii). Anywhere else, treat it as unverified. |
| Can the team mint more or freeze wallets? | No — mint, freeze, and update authority are all revoked. See page 04.                                      |
| Other chains besides Solana?              | No. Solana only. Anything elsewhere is not affiliated.                                                     |
| Can I use the mascot myself?              | Yes — that's what the generator toolkit is for.                                                            |
| What if this doesn't take off?            | Then it doesn't. That's the statistical norm for meme coins, not the exception.                            |

who's behind this —

TEAM & TRANSPARENCY

$FIRED is run by a small, pseudonymous team rather than a publicly-named company — the norm for this category. What's verifiable instead of trust-based: zero team allocation, zero presale, and mint/freeze/update authority revoked on-chain. Official communication only ever happens through the channels on the next page.

RISK DISCLOSURE

$FIRE has no intrinsic value and no utility beyond community and entertainment. It is not a security, not an investment product, and not financial advice. There is no promise or expectation of profit from the efforts of the team or anyone else.

Meme coins as a category are extremely high-risk: the large majority fail or go to zero, often within their first year. Prices can move violently in either direction with no warning. You should assume total loss of any funds used to buy $FIRE is possible.

Do your own research. Verify the official contract address through our X and Telegram accounts before every purchase — never trust an address from an unverified source. Only spend what you can afford to lose completely.
